

myguideTravel encourages students to Ireland

“Looking for something different to do this summer? Then why not visit Ireland and get paid for it!” That’s exactly what myguideTravel has offered students this summer.

myguideTravel in conjunction with Tourism Ireland have launched Summer of Travel™; 2007 a new programme which allows up to 10 students from the USA to discover Ireland and get paid $5000 for it!

Summer of Travel™; 2007 offers students the opportunity to write creative travel articles about Ireland and/or provide inspiring and engaging images of Ireland.

The lucky ten participants will be assigned a location in Ireland to spend three months absorbing the Irish culture. The programme aims to give participants more exposure to real-world publishing and to give them the opportunity to carry out work related to their interests this summer.

Conor B Buckley CEO myguideTravel said: “We decided to launch this programme for students to encourage them to visit Ireland and use their talents. All their material will be used as specific content created and published for the benefits of all tourists to Ireland on our new myguideIreland website. Millions of tourists to Ireland will see and read their material and you can’t get a better opportunity than that!”

To get involved or to find out more information about Summer of Travel™; 2007 visit www.summeroftravel.com